The computer is very simple, without much information, and tends to be inaccurate from time to time. You can also lean all the way or lean until you reach different muscle groups. You can go slow if it's easier for you, and you can work up a jog or run as well. We tried all the different positions they recommended, leaning all the way so as to work the chest muscles, standing up, leaning to work the core, short steps, long steps and all the rest. And again, if you buy one of the gazelles, consider adding two or three additional years of cover for tranquility. It arrived a few days later ... we were able to put it together in about half an hour or so, and we went to the breeds. They are a bit more expensive, but they are sturdy with higher weight capabilities, more workouts and some extras that don't go on the edge. What is the bottom line on the edge of the gazelle? You can get a full body workout, as your arms and legs are moving all the time. As we said, it's relatively easy to put together. As you move into training you get some advanced features and additional workout DVDs. The edge is the simplest and features 1.50 à 3 Steel rolled, wide foot platform, high density foam-covered handles, a basic computer that shows your speed, calories, time and distance and 6 different exercises built.
