Upon completing a quest, the player will receive a pre-determined number of Quest Points (QP) and some type of reward in the form of coins, items, skill experience (XP), or access to new content. Pre-existing quests have undergone significant change after first being recreated for the release of RS2. Since the release of pay-to-play membership, every quest has been exclusively available to members only. New players on a budget should use a ring of dueling to access the bank and restore stats. Previously, players had to manually keep note of their missing quests and some did not even know of quests. Quests that have been highlighted in green are those that have been completed, otherwise they are marked red. in: Trivia, Quests, Interface View source The 2002 manual contains information related to this topic. Unlike in RuneScape 2, quests remain colored red until they are completed. These can take varying amounts of time to complete and form some sort of cohesive story, comprised of dialogue and scripted events. Guide[edit | edit source] Experience lamps or books of knowledge received through random events or achievement diaries may be used on any skill of the player's choosing or to save time by shortening the next bit of training in this guide. Quests interface menu, with completed quests in green. Some boss fights might be hard to do with the stats listed here. Teleport to house (tablet) may also be used for emergency teleport. Completing achievement diaries will be beneficial throughout the game; some of the rewards include access to unlimited teleports, noted item drops, antique lamps, shortcuts, and additional Lunar spells. Temporary skill boosts may be used to meet the skill requirements. However, they can be obtained through other means. Always make sure to train up your combat stats to a level at which you're confident you can kill or survive dangerous parts of the listed quests. Trivia In the early days of Some missions have given influence to the completion of Quest - the first form of the search points. This guide does not take into account the unlockable content, such as fairy or dragon equipment, which provide numerous advantages to the player's game progression. Although most missions give a message of completion of the mission as "you have completed the X mission", this is not the case of everyone (for example, the missions of the combat arena and the jungle potion). However, they can be obtained by other means.  The observatory's mission is annoyed by the fact that it gives a message if the player's level is low, but it still does the action. Before 24 June 2001, the starting point of the mission was not given on the official maps of the world. In RSC, only one mini-quest was presented, the Alfred Grimhand Bar Crawl, being required to access the Agility Course of the outpost barbarian and to finish the Scorpion Catcher mission. The missions are groups of related activities, usually delegated and guided between the player and multiple non-player characters. The underlying missions are not listed in any specific order. The mission list can be found by clicking the Quest tab on the right side of the Stats page. In RuneScape 3: Sheep Shearer and Witch's Potion the missions were reclassified as a mini-quest and no longer reward Quest Points; Demon Slayer and Druidic Ritual have been changed considerably to add to their stories; 2-person missions have been modified to be single-player missions; Black Knight's Fortress, Doric's Quest, Prince Ali Rescue, and Romeo &right Juliet research were removed. missions.
